Mizuho Bank, Ltd.

Mizuho to Open a Representative Office in Washington, D.C.

Mizuho Bank, Ltd. (President & CEO: Koji Fujiwara, hereinafter “MHBK”) opened and started the operation of a representative office in Washington, D.C., the capital of the United States of America (hereinafter the “US”), on October 10, 2017.

Washington, D.C., is the source of information of all kinds of fields, including international affairs and economic, financial and trade policies. A number of private companies are working with think tanks, law firms, industry associations and international institutions located in the city to gather and analyze information pertaining to the US policies, legislation and other political developments and make recommendations.

Since 1953, when one of its legacy banks, Fuji Bank, established an office in the US, MHBK has successfully developed business in the country focusing mainly on Japanese subsidiaries and large US companies. It established a bank holding company in 2016 and reorganized the major US subsidiaries under it. It seeks to expand business through the collaboration of banking, securities and trust services in the world’s largest financial market and further enhance its presence as a global financial player.

Mizuho is enhancing its research and consulting function in order to establish itself as a financial services consulting group. The new office in Washington, D.C., will enable us to update our clients on the latest trends and provide integrated research and consulting solutions for their global business development.
