Mizuho Corporate Bank, Ltd.	Same as above	59.48	0.00	59.48	Unlisted

Note) The voting rights ownership percentage held indirectly is indicated within the parentheses of the section for the voting rights ownership percentage.

- b. Name of the controlling company that has the largest influence on MHSC and the reasons for the selection

Company name	Mizuho Financial Group, Inc.
Reasons	MHFG is in a position to exercise ultimate influence on MHSC and it is also the holding company that can determine the strategic direction of the financial group.

c. The position of MHSC in the financial group of the controlling companies, etc., and the other relationships between MHSC and the controlling companies, etc.

(i) The position of MHSC in the financial group of the controlling companies, etc., and Business relationships, Personal relationships and Capital ties with the controlling companies, etc. and their group companies	MHFG, which is the holding company of the financial group, and MHCB, which is a wholly-owned subsidiary of MHFG, are the controlling companies that hold the majority of the voting rights of MHSC, directly or indirectly. MHSC provides high value-added financial services as a full-line securities company of the global corporate group within the Mizuho Group of which MHFG is the financial holding company. Also, as of June 30, 2010, one corporate director, among the fifteen (15) board members of MHSC (of which nine (9) are directors and six (6) are corporate auditors), holds the concurrent post as a corporate auditor of MHFG.
(ii) Business restrictions, risks and merits arising from being the member company of the financial group of controlling companies, etc., and the effects on the management and business activities from Business relationships, Personal relationships and Capital ties, etc. with the controlling companies, etc. and their group companies	As MHCB and MHFG, as the holding company, hold the majority of the voting rights of MHSC, it is possible that the management policies of the controlling companies may have an impact on MHSC's decisions regarding its own management policies.
(iii) Ideas concerning establishment of certain independence from the controlling companies, etc. and the measures therefore, where there are Business restrictions arising from being the member company of the financial group of controlling companies, etc., and the effects on the management and business activities from Business relationships, Personal relationships and Capital ties, etc. with the controlling companies, etc. and their group companies	Although MHSC engages in business operations utilizing MHSC's strong full-line client base from wholesale to retail, its strong management base as a securities company with close ties with banks, its outstanding capability for the product/service development, and the global network of the Mizuho Group, MHSC also plans independent management strategies in order to enhance its independence with regard to its business activities from the controlling companies. Because only one board member among MHSC's fifteen (15) member board of directors holds a concurrent post with MHSC and MHFG, MHSC considers that it is in a position where it can make independent management decisions.
(iv) Status of establishment regarding certain independence from controlling companies, etc.	MHSC aims to broaden the business network by strengthening the cooperation within the financial group of the controlling companies. However, as the separation of business between MHSC, on the one hand, and the controlling companies and other companies within the Mizuho Group, on the other hand, is clarified, MHSC considers that there are no obstacles that inhibit MHSC's freedom to engage in business activities with the controlling companies or other companies of the Mizuho Group, and the circumstances of the board member holding a concurrent post with MHSC and MHFG do not inhibit independent management decisions, MHSC considers that its independence from the controlling companies has been established.
