Three Take-Aways

1) Trump's tariffs on Mexico, Canada and China buoys the Greenback and dents risk sentiments.

2) Even as inflation risks hog headlines to send front end yields soaring, demand erosion and sentiment swinging around possibility of negotiation tactics accentuate two way volatility.

3) India's Budget is encouraging but unable to sufficiently assure given growth risks and will likely dovetail RBI easing.

MACRO THEME: Chaos

- For what is worth, last Friday, US economic indicators were mixed with US personal spending coming in higher than expected while PCE price indices were aligned with market expectations and not particularly troubling. That said, troubles were aplenty over the weekend.

- Amid the impending (signed over the weekend and will be effective on 4 February) tariffs imposed by President Trump on imports from Canada, Mexico and China, US risk sentiments were negative as equities fell. Specifically, the US imposed 25% tariffs on most goods from Canada and Mexico as well as 10% tariffs on Canadian energy. As for imports from China, they will face an additional 10% tariff.

- Retaliation was swift from Canada though staggered with around 20% of the CAD$155bn of imports from the US set to face 25% tariffs effective tomorrow with the remainder in force three week later. The speed of these responses perhaps suggest some level of preparation. Mexico and China will also likely retaliate in various forms this week.

- On the whole, from an economics point of view, this type of just across the border tariffs in North America erodes the comparative advantage conferred by geographical proximity even for US industries which may in turn diminishes demand and demand erosion may come at a speed faster than the often worried about inflation pass through (aside from pump prices which will likely jump given the importance of Canadian Crude).

- In that vein, reports of "Canada First" plan or other patriotism efforts may also worsen the lower marginal demand for US goods. North Asia's pineapple saga perhaps provides a mini case study and some reminders for North America.

- Market reactions from the onset is clear with the USD buoyant to start the week and US equities futures firmly in the red. The EU will get little comfort given that Trump has signalled that it (tariffs) will definitely happen.

- Domestically, investors will continue parsing through US domestic turmoil with Elon Musk reportedly halting payments to US contractors amid the departure of the Treasury Department's most senior career official.

- Externally, aside from tariffs, amid a suspension of foreign assistance, foreign relations appear in disarray with US AID (Agency for International Development) officials put on leave for resisting DOGE access to systems and the website going offline. DATA/EVENTS

Yields (2Y: -0.9bp; 10Y: +2.4bp; 30Y: +2.7bp)

- UST yield curve steepened last Friday. That said, the curve has flattened this morning as front end yields surged on trade war fears.

Equities (Nasdaq: -0.3%; S&P 500: -0.5%; Dow: -0.8%)

- US equities fell last Friday and futures are in the red.

FX (DXY: +0.5%)

- The Greenback has surged. EUR sank below mid-1.02 and AUD dived below mid-61 cents.

- While the USD/JPY managed to go hover around 155 in defiance of the Greenback strength, the guise of safe haven may be easily exposed once higher UST yields and oil prices exert.

- EM-Asia FX will start the week on the backfoot and last week's outperformers such as the THB may face headwinds even though Thailand's current account surplus present a welcoming surplus of US$2.9bn in December which affirms improving flows.

China: Channel

- In response to Trump's tariffs, China has opted for rather diplomatic channels with legal proceeding to the WTO rather than explicitly threatening tariffs.

- Meanwhile, Macro Rubio's visit to Panama saw Panama President concede that the country will now renew participation in China's belt and Road incident. Nonetheless, given the presence of Chinese ports in Panama, this issue is far from being resolved.

India Budget - Encouraging But Not Sufficiently Assuring

Fiscal consolidation was slightly better than anticipated (from an already commendable path to deficit reduction). FY25 fiscal deficit expected to be 4.8% of GDP from earlier estimates of 4.9%. FY26 deficit is targeted to be 4.4% from earlier projections of 4.5%.

Despite fiscal consolidation, the Budget presented the equivalent of a consumption boost via tax reductions specifically where INR 700k of annual income was earlier exempted from taxes the exemption has now been lifted to INR 1.2m.

The good news is budget estimates are not unreasonable. Real GDP outlook at 6.3-6.8% appears reasonable in the absence of global shocks (which cannot be ruled out),

Tax buoyancy has been reduced to reflect the increased exemptions, it may not fully capture greater downside risks.

Hence, the risk is tilted towards fiscal slippage driven by shortfall in tax collections. At the margin, this provides incremental but not significant rupee backstop. Notably, the fiscal consolidation path ought to dovetail the RBI's inclination to ease policy.

In all this, global headwinds from Trump 2.0 amid signs of domestic demand slowdown (some of which may be hard to shake off just on tax cuts) remain the biggest bumps on the road for INR and macrostability.
