Three Take-Aways

1) Consideration of VW consideration of unprecedented factory closures in Germany underscore EZ growth woes as EZ PMI stayed in deep contractionary territory.

2) Libya woes did not overwhelm concerns of OPEC+ supply resumption and global growth concerns.

3) Korea CPI this morning sets the stage for BoK easing in Q4 though domestic woes imply push back on back to back cuts.

MACRO THEME: Resting or Restive?

- Amid closed US markets for Labour Day, the usual caution on extrapolation of scant trading is a sensible approach.

- On that uncertain note, Libya's declared force majeure on a key oil field remain a supply side concern for oil price even though the inability of Brent Crude to recover back above US$77/barrel is perhaps reflective of pipeline resumption of OPEC+ supply and global growth concerns.

- Meanwhile, in the Eurozone, manufacturing PMI final print expected stayed deep in contractionary territory with the slight upward revision really little cause for optimism.

- This is especially so in light of Volkswagen AG's consideration of closing factories in Germany which will be an unprecedented move as competition with US and China automobile companies intensify.

Yields (US Markets: Closed)

- Consequently, even as EZ sovereign yields headed higher on the likes of wage pressures in UK and caution on over-extended bets for ECB cuts, the higher cost of borrowing ought to lean towards a reason to worry about rather a case for relief on risk sentiments.

Equities (US Markets: Closed)

- In the same vein, the EU Stoxx being able to hold ground last session and perhaps even extend gains should Volkswagen's factory closures be seen as cost cutting to improve bottom lines, the reality of slowing manufacturing growth and attendant adverse spillovers to services sector as the wider backdrop should not go unnoticed.

FX (DXY: -0.04%)

- Amid thinner trading, DXY remained buoyed above mid-101.

- AUD gained most among G10 peers as RBA Deputy Governor continued the hawkish push back on cuts stating that inflation in Australia is a bit stickier than in the US. That said, the bar for durable rallies above 68 cents appears high especially with looming GDP print to underscore demand concerns.

- Meanwhile, EUR rose slightly to trade in the upper half of mid-1.10. USD/JPY continues to approach 147 amid the re-calibration of deep Fed cut expectations.

- In EM-Asia, USD/SGD crawled up marginally still trading below 1.31.

DATA/EVENTS

Last Friday/Over the Weekend	Actual	Exp.	Prior
(CH) Caixin China PMI Mfg (Aug)	50.4	50.0	49.8

(US) ISM Mfg/Prices Paid (Aug)		47.5/-	46.8/52.9

- Amid the impact from higher UST yields last Friday, the THB led losses in Asia yesterday. The BoT also hinted at avoiding excessive THB baht moves which could hurt businesses and this was likely interpreted as the recent appreciation denting export competitiveness. Furthermore, the new of BoT meeting the finance ministry in early September to discuss the inflation target may also bring forth bets on potential BoT easing.

China: Compounding Economic Conundrum

- China's conundrum as it stares down the barrel of structural economic gloom is that familiar playbook credit-push and fiscal thrust risk falling short. For the record, dismal (official) manufacturing PMI numbers are but the latest manifestation of its on-going structural headwinds.

- In which case, it is imperative to recognize that this is not just a garden variety cyclical downturn, but arguably reflect a deepening conundrum. Crucially, it involves unrelenting crisis of chronic confidence deficit compounded by mis-aligned socio-political and economic objectives. And that is even before the mounting geo-political challenges that confront Beijing are factored in.

- Why this is particularly worrying is because the confidence crisis results in consumers holding back on spending and business withhold investments. The resultant, chronically diminished growth multipliers means that Beijing is confronted by an uphill struggle to reinstate selfsustaining "escape velocity" growth momentum.

- The upshot is that simply throwing money at the problem, whether it is via bank credit or local government special bonds, is not sufficient.

- Accordingly, criticisms of "too little, too late" policy stimulus are justified, but still fall short of properly addressing the root cause of economic malaise. It then follows that attempts to simply pump prime their way towards 5% growth for 2024 is a temporary distraction that merely kicks the can down a darkening road.

- And so, it is hollow consolation that the CNH has rebounded significantly. Point being, while the stable RMB provides welcomed relief from policy dilemma, it does not distract from the chronic confidence crisis which in turn keeps latent CNH pressures intact.

Korea CPI: Uneasy Easing?

- In Korea, this morning's CPI print saw headline inflation ease below expectations (2.1%) to 2.0% YoY in August from July's 2.6% YoY print. Core inflation was in line with expectations at 2.1% YoY declining slightly from 2.2% seen in July.

- In general, the easing of headline inflation was largely due to base effects from a year ago and this is reflected by the 0.4% MoM rise in headline inflation with food inflation rising 1.2% MoM caused by surging vegetable prices. That said, core inflation rising just 0.1% MoM is a relief for the BoK and will set the tone for the BoK to ease in Q4. Nonetheless, the BoK will still likely strike a meeting by meeting approach to impart caution. In turn, KRW bulls may face fading tailwinds given the propsects of rate cuts while trade tensions and semiconductor valuations impart volatility.
