Three Take-Aways

1) US equities rebound after recent sell-off with UST yields edging up on the front end.

2) USD traction reflects cautious sentiments alongside languishing oil prices, China woes, weak UK jobs and geo-political threats.

3) Thailand's revived casino related entertainment complex plans may hold potentially large economic boost though structural productivity unlikely to be lifted.

MACRO THEME: Cyclical Bounce and Structural Woes?

- For now, the recovery in risk sentiments appears to be just a bounce. Even after the recovery last night, US equities are still ~2.7% down compared to the start of last week. Overnight, UST yields were slightly higher on the front end still more than 20bps lower than a week ago. Notably, the USD has retained traction even with just marginally higher UST yields being supportive.

- First, with an imminent Fed cut amid growth woes, it is unsurprising that growth soft spots elsewhere also invite easing bias as was the case for 2Y EZ yields which declined alongside worsening investor confidence. 2Y UK Gilt yields dropped 6.6bp accompanied by a weak jobs report.

- Second, growth woes in and of itself were also reflected by an uninspiring Brent crude recovery unable to surmount US$72/barrel weighed by China growth worries.

- Lastly, reports of Donald Trump closing the gap on Kamala Harris' lead accentuates recent Trump threats of 100% tariffs for countries that leave the USD may also have dented currencies of various trading partners.

Yields (2Y: +2.3bps; 10Y: -0.8bps; 30Y: -1.8bps)

- UST yield curve flattened but retained its positive slope.

Equities (Nasdaq: +1.2%; S&P: +1.2%; Dow: +1.2%)

- US equities rebounded across broad sectors.

FX (DXY: +0.4%)

- The USD gained against most G10 peers. NOK led losses on continued impact from lower oil prices. Alongside low EZ yields, EUR sank below mid-1.10. AUD dropped towards mid-66 cents. In EM-Asia, THB continued its volatile nature, depreciating 1.3% as Thai Finance Minister warned against THB rally hurting exporters.

China: Yi Gang's Warning

- Former PBoC governor Yi Gang delivered an unusual speech in public addressing China's deflationary pressure amid sluggish domestic demand.

- He urged policymakers to adopt both fiscal and monetary measures to bring GDP deflators back to positive territory. However, concerns remain that China's ongoing property slump could strain local government revenues, limiting their ability to stimulate domestic demand, thereby adding downside risks to growth.

Thailand: Uneasy Bets

- With Paetongtarn Shinawatra as the Prime Minister, the draft of the Entertainment Complex Act approved earlier this month sets the stage for establishment of casinos in Thailand to be featured in her policy plans. To be upfront, the inflows from enlarged tourism receipts will bolster the THB's medium term prospects and increase in fiscal revenue collections from both gaming duties and associated consumption and income taxes can also alleviate pressures from a precarious fiscal trajectory.

- As for the details, inadvertently, there are similarities with Singapore such as entry levies for locals and requirements to incorporate tourism elements such as departmental store, hotels and amusement park.

- In terms of the licence, the draft details indicate that it is valid for up to 30 years and the applicant is required to pay 5bn THB (~US$141m) to register and 1bn THB (~US$28m) to operate a year. In Singapore, the licence is valid for 3 years, and the operation fee also stands at hefty S$24m (~US$18m). Given that tourist arrivals in Thailand is about twice that of Singapore's, differences in operating fees are not surprising. As for taxes on Gross Gaming Revenue, the reported 17% rate for Thailand is slightly below Singapore top rate of 18% for 'other players' while much higher than the 8% for 'premium' players.

- Admittedly, abstracting from social costs, there is huge potential for significant economic gains given their comparative advantage in the hospitality industry and may also generate sizeable employment gains.

- Nonetheless, it is perhaps worth remembering that the labour intensive gaming sector and the associated services sector remains relatively low in the technological ladder and will have limited productivity/learning by doing gains to exploit. As such, while the economic boost is substantial, the enlarged services sector further entrenches the difficulty of escaping the Middle Income Trap to raise GDP per capita and resolving woes from underlying structural issues such as unfavorable population dynamics.

- Looking ahead, the legal and operational hurdles as well as contentious public reception imply that the journey to establish is unlikely to be smooth sailing especially given that previous attempts during the Thaksin administration was also unable to bring it to fruition.

- As for the BoT, they will likely be cautious of the potential increase in household debt from such plans given. That said, increasingly the current concerns are tightening of financial conditions amid decline in credit quality among households and SMES causing BoT Governor Sethaput to strike dovish tones on the potential for monetary policy easing.
