Three Take-Aways

- 1) Risk sentiments softer ahead of US CPI and as Middle East turmoil continues; US equities were lower and Gold extended its climb.
- 2) Cautious sentiments heading into China's two-day Central Economic Work Conference commencing today.
- 3) RBA left policy rate unchanged, but mounting growth concerns revealed in statement.

MACRO THEME: The Waiting Game

- Risk sentiments were softer ahead of US CPI today. US equities traded lower while odds of a 25bps cut by Fed next week remains at ~85%, unchanged from the day prior.
- Gold extended its climb, moving higher by ~1.3% despite higher UST yields, as geopolitical concerns boosted haven demand. Israel struck strategic weapons stockpiles in Syria to prevent them from falling into the hands of the rebels* that brought down Assad's government.

*The rebels are led by Hayat Tahrir Al-Sham, an Islamist group oriignally affiliated with Al-Qaeda.

Yields (2Y: +1.9bp; 10Y: +2.5bp, 30Y: +3.3bp)

- UST yields climbed higher.

Equities (Nasdaq: -0.3%; S&P: -0.3%; Dow: -0.4%)

- US equities closed lower.

FX (DXY: +0.2%)

- The USD was mostly stronger against the G10 currencies amid higher UST yields.
- AUD underperformed, moving below 64 cents amid dovish hints in its statement while holding policy rate unchanged.
- EUR performed in the middle of the pack, dipping under mid-1.05 levels
- USD/JPY moved above mid-151 levels while USD/SGD saw buoyancy above 1.34 levels.

China: Cautious Optimism

- Optimism on incoming stimulus at the two-day annual Central Economic Work Conference (CEWC) commencing today can be characterised as cautious. While the conclusion of the conference could reveal more stimulus as top leaders decide on growth targets and set the policy direction for the economy in the coming year, market sentiments were less upbeat.
- CSI300 only gained ~0.7% yesterday while the Nasdaq Golden Dragon Index dropped ~4.3%, following disappointing exports growth cast further headwinds amid the overhang of Trump's tariffs, while imports growth contracted further underscoring the chronic consumer confidence.

- Regardless, we predict that the government will maintain a growth target of "around 5%" for 2025 amid increased trade uncertainties. In addition, we anticipate a significantly larger fiscal deficit of RMB 5.2-5.5 trillion, or 3.8-4.0% of GDP, next year, as the government seeks to stimulate domestic demand. Notably, Xinhua News, a leading Chinese state media outlet, stated last Friday that the country has "ample room" to increase its fiscal deficit in 2025.
- On growth, we have raised our GDP forecast for 2025 to 4.8% (prev: 4.3%), taking into account the following factors:
- i) We believe the threat of a 60% US tariff on all Chinese goods is intended to secure better terms in US negotiations with China, and its economic impact should be relatively limited.
- ii) We expect the PBoC to prioritize efforts to guide a moderate increase in prices and implement a total interest rate cut of 60bp in 2025.
- iii) China's debt swap initiative, which will convert RMB 5.6 trillion of hidden local debt over the next 13 months, should enhance local fiscal conditions and provide local governments with more resources to tackle their domestic economic challenges.

RBA: Unchanged, but Not Unmoved

- RBA left cash rate target unchanged at 4.35%, but changes in the statement suggests that growth concerns mount.
- We view the RBA's reframing of inflation situation as being needed to pave the way for them to cut rates in consideration of growth. Notably, economic activity, on balance, was "softer than expected" in November and the RBA noted downside risks on household consumption. In particular, both income and consumption had recovered a little slower than forecast, and there was risks to a slower pick-up in consumption looking ahead.
- On the inflation front, RBA's gaining of confidence appears to stem from a step down in Q3 wage growth 3.5% from Q2's 4.2% even though wage momentum stayed at 0.8% QoQ, the trimmed mean inflation was bumped higher and labour market remains robust. In short, this pivot appears to be more of a change in their response function rather than convincing data prints.
- While RBA refrained from forward guidance, Governor Bullock remarked that RBA do not necessarily need 2 or 3 quarterly CPI prints to move, which could suggest that the first cut may be faster-than-expected in Q1 should inflation or growth should further signs of cooling.
- With AUD now plummeting to sub-64 cents, even as our base case is to remain concerned on growth downside in 2025 exacerbating rate cuts which dull AUD performance, there is ample near term upside volatility risks on bumpy inflation reigniting doubt on the RBA's inflation framing. To be clear, we are of the view that the RBA could still take to the view that the low headline inflation allows for rate cut given that some of the current government subsidies ought to be retained in the baseline.
